

TML Leadership Academy

Course Two: Ethical and Influential Leadership

High Performing Teams: Working Together

Jenny Mehmedovic, Assistant Director of Consulting and Coaching Services, University of Kansas Public Management Center

Elected officials and staff leadership play a vital role in fostering cultures of collaboration, innovation, and shared purpose within their teams. When this culture prevails, a team is capable of extraordinary outcomes.

In this session, we'll speak about the characteristics of high-performing teams, investigate the structures that value each team member's contribution and collaboration, and discuss practical tools you can use to move your organization even further in this direction. Then, participants will apply these ideas to their current work and teams, taking time to share both their challenges and expertise.

Jenny Mehmedovic, Assistant Director of Consulting and Coaching Services in the KU Public Management Center. Jenny has over 25 years of experience designing and facilitating strategic planning, leadership development, professional development, and team building for higher education, non-profit, and public sector leaders and their organizations. Jenny presents nationally on leadership, organizational change, organizational and professional development, high performing teams, communication styles, conflict management, and working from your strengths. She provides professional facilitation and executive coaching for leaders engaged in personal or organizational growth, strategic planning, team building, and process improvement. Jenny has an MBA from the University of Kansas, is a Board-Certified Executive Coach, and an International Coaching Federation Associate Certified Coach, with membership in the ICF Heartland Chapter. She is a certified administrator of the Influence Style Indicator, Emotional Intelligence EQ-I 2.0/EQ 360, and Emergenetics International communication styles.